SDG 4.3.1	Free access to educational resources to non-enrolled students

Dawood University of Engineering and Technology (DUET) actively engages in initiatives that extend educational resources and opportunities beyond its enrolled students, fostering a community-oriented approach to learning and development. This commitment is demonstrated through various programs that make educational resources accessible to individuals not formally enrolled at DUET:

Free Book Fair:

DUET hosted a book fair, offering free access to a wide range of academic and non-academic books for students outside the university. Hundreds of students from diverse educational backgrounds participated in this event, selecting books that aligned with their personal and academic interests. This initiative allowed individuals not formally studying at DUET to access valuable knowledge resources, supporting their educational pursuits without financial constraints.

Study Abroad Expo: The DUET's Career Counselling and Placement Bureau (CCPB), under the Vice Chancellor's Initiative, organized the Study Abroad Expo in collaboration with the Australian Education Office (AEO). This event was open to the public, allowing non-enrolled students to explore study options in Australia, Canada, Malaysia, the USA, and the UK. Visitors gained insights into academic opportunities, scholarship programs, and visa processes, fostering aspirations for international education.

Webinars on Career Development and Financial Literacy: DUET regularly organizes webinars on practical skills and career development topics open to all, regardless of enrollment status.

Webinar on ‘CV Writing’: This session provided insights into crafting effective resumes and was available to a broader audience, equipping attendees with job market readiness skills.

These initiatives illustrate DUET’s dedication to providing educational resources and support to those outside the university, promoting inclusive access to learning tools, skill development programs, and academic guidance. Through these efforts, DUET contributes to the broader educational landscape, ensuring that resources are accessible to students and community members beyond its enrolled population.
